FISCAL YEAR 2026 IMPACT REPORT

MESSAGE FROM LEADERSHIP

One of the great privileges of leading DoveLewis is seeing people do extraordinary work every day. Whether caring for a beloved family dog or cat, or stabilizing a critically injured owl, our teams bring remarkable compassion, expertise, and dedication to every patient who comes through our doors.

Our community depends on that care. Yet economic pressures continue to put emergency and specialty veterinary services out of reach for many families, increasing the need for our charity care programs.

This year, an incredible act of generosity strengthened our ability to meet that need. A $3.6 million gift from a donor established the Piper Fund, a permanent endowment supporting care for stray and lost animals who have no one else to advocate for them. This gift enables us to care for animals in need today while creating long-term financial sustainability for generations to come. (Story on page 4.)

Last year also marked the return of our Emergency and Critical Care Residency Program. As a teaching hospital, DoveLewis has an important role to play in addressing the national shortage of veterinary specialists. By training the next generation of emergency and critical care specialists, we are investing not only in the future of DoveLewis, but also in the future of veterinary medicine. (Story on page 9.)

This year, DoveLewis was once again accredited as Oregon's only Level I Hospital by the Veterinary Emergency & Critical Care Society, the highest level of recognition for emergency and critical care. We also maintained six levels of accreditation from the American Animal Hospital Association. Together, these distinctions recognize the exceptional standards of veterinary medicine, expertise, and care our teams uphold every day. (Story on page 7.)

None of this happens without you. Your generosity helps ensure that animals receive care regardless of their circumstances, veterinary professionals have opportunities to learn and grow, and our community has access to exceptional emergency and specialty medicine when it matters most.

Thank you for believing in DoveLewis and for making this work possible.

With Gratitude,

Ron Morgan,
DoveLewis President & CEO

The Piper Fund: A New Lifeline for Stray and Lost Animals

A stray dog seriously injured in a hit-and-run. A litter of kittens abandoned in a dumpster. A cat suffering from a painful wound with no owner to turn to for help.

Every year, more than a thousand sick and injured stray and lost animals arrive at DoveLewis, brought to us by neighbors and Good Samaritans. When other animal welfare organizations are closed for the night, DoveLewis is the only option for emergency medical care.

For these animals, philanthropy can mean the difference between suffering and a second chance.

In July 2025, one of our generous donors made an extraordinary $3.6 million gift to establish the Piper Fund, a permanent endowment dedicated to caring for stray and lost animals. The donor was moved by a simple truth: these animals “don’t have anyone to speak for them.”

As a nonprofit veterinary hospital, DoveLewis has long relied on philanthropy to extend our mission beyond the care funded through our medical services. Donor support allows us to respond when an animal’s need is urgent but the resources to pay for that care simply aren’t there. That role is increasingly important as rising veterinary costs, financial hardship, and pressure on shelters leave more animals vulnerable.

The Piper Fund creates a permanent source of support for this work. Established as an endowment, the fund will provide substantial annual support for the program, helping sustain and strengthen its work today while ensuring its impact continues for generations to come.

This is philanthropy at its most powerful: one person’s compassion becoming a lasting resource for an entire community. We are deeply grateful to the donor whose generosity ensures DoveLewis can continue to be here for animals with nowhere else to turn, giving a voice to those who have no one else to speak for them.

Charity Care

Generous donors make it possible for DoveLewis to offer financial assistance to families facing economic hardship, care for lost or abused animals, and provide lifesaving treatment to injured wildlife. These programs extend our nonprofit mission and bring compassionate veterinary care to animals who might otherwise go without.

Featured Story

Boots, a senior cat who is deaf and frail, was found wandering the streets alone. A compassionate stranger brought him to DoveLewis, where he arrived weak and in urgent need of medical care.

Because of generous donors, DoveLewis can be here for stray and lost animals like Boots when they have nowhere else to turn. Our veterinary team stabilized him, provided the care he needed, and ultimately helped reunite him with his family.

The relief of that reunion, and Boots' quiet purrs, are powerful reminders of what philanthropy makes possible: lifesaving care, second chances, and the opportunity to bring a beloved family member home.

Animal Health & Medical Services

Philanthropy helps make exceptional veterinary medicine possible at DoveLewis. Donor generosity strengthens our ability to invest in the people, technology, and resources required to deliver advanced care around the clock and remain ready when our community needs us most.

That investment allows DoveLewis to continually raise the standard of veterinary medicine in our region, expand access to specialized expertise, and take on some of the most urgent and complex cases referred by veterinarians and animal welfare partners throughout the community.

This year, a donor's generosity helped fund the purchase of a cardiac catheterization lab, elevating our cardiology services and expanding the advanced procedures available to our patients. It's a powerful example of how philanthropy can bring innovative technology and treatment options to DoveLewis and help shape the future of veterinary care in our region.

Every gift is an investment in what comes next: stronger veterinary teams, new possibilities for treatment, and advanced care for the animals who depend on us.

"One of the things that makes practicing medicine at DoveLewis so unique is how much we learn from each other. We have exceptional medicine happening across multiple specialties, but what really sets us apart is the collaboration and continuity of care between those teams. We get to work together, share our expertise, and ultimately provide better care for our patients."

Only the Best for Oregon Animals

At DoveLewis, extraordinary veterinary care is a choice we make every day, and one our donors help make possible. Philanthropy allows us to support our staff, upgrade technology, and provide the training required to deliver top-tier medicine when animals need us most.

DoveLewis is Oregon's only veterinary hospital certified as a Level I emergency and critical care facility by the Veterinary Emergency and Critical Care Society (VECCS). It is the organization's highest designation and one held by only 24 animal hospitals worldwide.

Level I certification recognizes much more than medical expertise. It reflects the depth of our veterinary team, the advanced technology and equipment, and the coordinated systems required to provide sophisticated emergency and critical care 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. When every second counts, DoveLewis is prepared to care for even the most critically ill and injured animals.

DoveLewis also maintains six levels of accreditation from the American Animal Hospital Association (AAHA), a distinction earned by only about 15 percent of veterinary hospitals in North America. Accreditation requires hospitals to meet nearly 900 rigorous standards spanning virtually every aspect of veterinary care.

These distinctions affirm something our donors have long understood: world-class medicine requires continual investment. Your generosity helps DoveLewis recruit and develop outstanding veterinary professionals, acquire advanced medical technology, and continue raising the standard of care available to animals throughout our region.

"Maintaining VECCS Level I certification reflects years of investment in our people, technology, and medical programs. For our community, it means having one of the world's highest levels of emergency and critical care available right here in Oregon whenever it's needed."

Investing in Veterinary Professionals

Advanced veterinary care starts with highly trained people. At DoveLewis, philanthropy helps us invest in veterinary professionals at every stage of their careers, from students and new graduates to experienced veterinarians and technicians. As an accredited teaching hospital, DoveLewis places education at the center of our mission and our work to advance veterinary medicine throughout the community.

Donor generosity has helped build that commitment over time. In 2012, philanthropic support launched the Loacker Golden Education Program, creating opportunities for veterinary professionals to strengthen their skills and bring new knowledge back to the animals and families they serve.

Today, that impact reaches well beyond DoveLewis. We provide free continuing education to veterinary professionals throughout the region, sharing advanced practices in emergency and specialty medicine with colleagues at other clinics. Our online learning platform, atDove.org, offers on-demand clinical and communication training videos and CE lectures to professionals around the globe.

Investing in veterinary professionals also means caring for the people behind the medicine. Veterinary work can carry a significant emotional toll, and DoveLewis is one of the few veterinary hospitals in the country with an on-site licensed clinical social worker who supports the well-being of veterinary professionals.

When donors invest in professional education and well-being at DoveLewis, the impact multiplies. Stronger veterinary providers lead to more resilient teams, better medicine, and enhanced care for animals at DoveLewis and throughout the veterinary community.

"In veterinary emergency and specialty care, we face intense, often traumatic cases. It's only natural that veterinary staff feel the mental and emotional impact of that care. My work is about helping people recognize this and being intentional in how they support themselves and each other."

Emergency and Critical Care Residency Program

In July 2025, DoveLewis welcomed 3 veterinarians into our Emergency and Critical Care Residency Program. It's an important investment in developing the next generation of specialists and strengthening the future of veterinary medicine.

Designed to prepare the next generation of board-certified emergency and critical care specialists, known as criticalists, the three-year program combines rigorous education with hands-on experience in one of the nation's busiest emergency animal hospitals. Working alongside experienced DoveLewis mentors, residents gain experience across an extraordinary range of cases, from common emergencies to complex, life-threatening conditions. That depth of training prepares them to become highly skilled criticalists whose expertise will benefit animals, veterinary teams, and communities throughout their careers.

Residents also receive mentorship in leadership, communication, teaching, and professional well-being, preparing them to become not only exceptional clinicians but also educators and leaders in veterinary medicine.

The need for this investment extends far beyond DoveLewis. A nationwide shortage of veterinary specialists makes training the next generation increasingly important. As our program grows, DoveLewis plans to welcome additional residents each year, expanding the number of highly trained criticalists and broadening access to advanced veterinary care in Oregon and beyond.

"My experience at DoveLewis has strengthened my clinical skills, confidence, and commitment to emergency and critical care, while giving me the foundation to provide high-quality, compassionate care to critically ill patients and their families."

Strengthening the Human-Animal Bond

At DoveLewis, our mission is to care for every animal and every person who cares for them. Always. Philanthropy helps us carry that mission beyond the walls of our hospitals, supporting programs that bring comfort, connection, care, and education to people and animals throughout our community.

Donor support allows our Pet Loss Support Program to provide a compassionate place for people mourning a beloved animal, and our community education programs give pet families practical knowledge and resources to keep their animals healthy and safe. Our Portland Area Canine Therapy Teams extend compassion into the broader community, bringing comfort and connection to people experiencing grief, stress, and crisis.

That spirit of community is also reflected in the work of the DoveLewis Blood Bank, where pets and their people volunteer to provide critical blood products that save the lives of animals at DoveLewis and at veterinary hospitals throughout the region.

Our commitment extends to animals who serve our community, too. DoveLewis has a contract with the Portland Police Bureau to provide all veterinary care to the K9 officers, from vaccines to emergency needs, supporting the health of the working dogs who keep our community safe.

Through philanthropy, these programs create an impact that reaches far beyond any one animal or family. Together, our donors, volunteers, and veterinary professionals are strengthening the human-animal bond and building a more compassionate community for everyone who calls it home.

"Debrah, with her calm voice and warm words, guided us through some very difficult moments. She helped us understand how lucky we were to have had the chance to share our lives with someone like Fiona. And she helped us understand that grief, in many ways, is simply another expression of love."

Fiscal Year 2026 Financial Performance

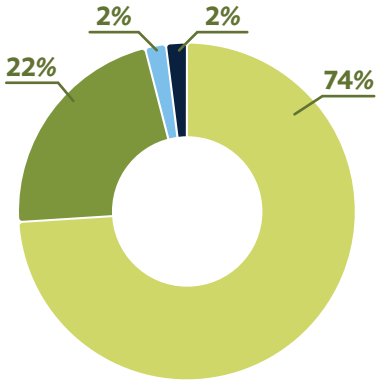

DoveLewis closed FY26 in a strong financial position, reflecting disciplined stewardship and extraordinary generosity from our donor community. Total revenue reached $43.9 million, 8% above budget, while expenses remained essentially on plan. DoveLewis ended the year with a $4.9 million increase in net assets while treating 17% more patients than in the prior fiscal year.

Philanthropy played an important role in these results. Donors contributed a record $9.7 million, providing resources to meet needs today while building long-term financial stability through endowment support.

DoveLewis ended FY26 with $30 million in total assets and $16.7 million in net assets. These results reflect our commitment to managing resources responsibly, investing philanthropic funds where it can have a meaningful impact, and ensuring DoveLewis remains strong for the animals and people who will depend on us for generations to come.

Philantropy and Volunteerism

We are incredibly fortunate to have such a generous and committed community of donors and volunteers standing alongside us. Your compassion, generosity, and dedication make you essential partners in our mission and reflect a deep commitment to caring for animals and the people who love them.

This year, that collective generosity was extraordinary. Together, our community contributed more than $9.7 million, nearly twice our fundraising goal for the year, and our volunteers contributed more than 21,750 hours in service to DoveLewis.

Every gift, every hour, and every act of generosity strengthens our ability to deliver on our mission today while building a stronger DoveLewis for the future.

We are deeply grateful for your trust, your partnership, and all that we make possible together.

"I believe in DoveLewis because I've seen what's possible when a community comes together around a shared love of animals. Philanthropy provides the resources to make this work possible, while volunteering and serving on the board give me the opportunity to be personally invested in its success. For me, giving both time and financial support is a meaningful way to strengthen an organization that is there to help ensure exceptional care is available for animals and the people who love them when they need it most."
