Support at PDX!

I met a family at the airport going to Disneyland. I should have got a picture of those two little kids who were going to Disneyland snuggling with Brea. The two- or three-year-old daughter was right down at face level, so Brea snuck in a lick. I commented that "Brea likes to give kisses," but I think she heard "Brea likes kisses" because she leaned over and gave Brea a kiss on the top of her head. So sweet!

As soon as I entered Concourse C, I saw someone alone at an empty gate. I assumed she was waiting for her flight, or just pausing on her way to her gate. Her expression said she wanted to engage with Brea, so I went over and asked. After some small talk, she shared that she had severe travel anxiety and was working to make her way out of the airport. After getting off her flight, she would stop every few gates on her way out to collect herself and then move a few more gates. She shared that she had flown out of Pittsburgh, where they also had therapy dogs in the airport. She commented that they must have brought the dogs in just for her to help her with her anxiety. After getting love from Brea, she smiled and said she thought she was ready to go the rest of the way out of the airport. - John & Brea

A Special Thank You

*Aloha, Aunā, Kelsey, and Marvin, Mahalo (thank you) for greeting the Hawaii Honor Flight during our stopovers thru PDX.
After the long flights, our bodies needed to bend and stretch, get down on one knee, hunch over, required for petting you and your fellow canines.*

Oh yeah, it was nice to interact with the humans on the other end of the leashes, LOL.

There were so many Hawaii veterans (25) to refresh your memory, I was the one with the STETSON, cowboy hat!!

*Thanks again,
Cammie K. Mahoe III*
